An internal inquiry may be a daunting experience. Employees may face domestic inquiries over disciplinary issues whereas medical professionals are also often subjected to various peer reviews and hospital inquiries. This event will help explain the different processes and the legal principles involved. The right to be heard or the right to natural justice, being at the core of many inquiries of this nature. The event will also discuss some recent cases relating to the discoverability or obligation to disclose documents created during the course of these internal inquiries. Our employment & industrial relations practice group joins forces with our healthcare practice group to bring this discussion into your hospital's lounges!
