Come 1st September 2022, the far-reaching amendments to the Employment Act 1955 will kick in. The scope and applicability of the Act have been expanded, the Act now providing statutory entitlements to all individuals who have entered into contracts of service, subject to certain exceptions. As a result, organisations will have to review their employment documentation and practices to ensure compliance with those changes.

Join Tham Li Vyenn and Sia Wui San from our Employment and Industrial Relations practice group as they clarify the changes to the Malaysian employment landscape as a result of these amendments.
